Should My Dog Eat Table Scraps?

Everybody knows the story of the child who doesn't want to eat dinner, so, when nobody is looking, the food disappears under the tables and into the family dog's eager mouth. While lots of people can't help but give in to the big, soulful eyes of a begging chowhound, table scraps and leftovers should be limited to the human beings for whom they were cooked. Human food can make dogs sick as well as lead to obesity. Pancreatitis caused by ingestion of high protein and fat foods can land your pet in the hospital for days or weeks, depending on the severity of the reaction and not the amount of human food offered. Some foods, including avocados, can cause digestive issues while others, such as hops, can cause death. If you suspect your animal has ingested a food that can cause problems, please call us at 530-885-1919 to set up an appointment with one of our knowledgeable veterinarians. We are located at 1055 Grass Valley Hwy. Consider joining our family.

P.S. Some foods that can cause illness or death in your pets include, grapes, raisins, chocolate, macadamia nuts, caffeine, alcohol, moldy foods, butter, gravy, meat gristle. Turkey necks and giblets are not good to feed your pets.
